Sparks from the Horse Shoe.

Said a merchant to another.
Surely friend, I am your brother.
For thy waist is just the same
All into thy net is game.
Ah! my friend, I'm very true.
That lightly flows with you.
Rich and poor alike, I say
Truly must the piper pay.
But come, draw the line at fence.
For here, forthwith resemblance ceases.
Know that from olden days
Cloaked by far-fetched hyperbole.
Beneath that cloak things may transpire.
'Twould hardly rally the public eye.
Were they, to view with unclouded eye.
Transparence lights up smoothly by.
Who dares to say a man like me.
A would-be nob of pedigree.
Should stoop to barter, mean and low.
From which good profits freely flow.
Not you by jove, must have the name.
While I more cute will have the game.
From Hyacinth stander henceforth free.
A bulwark of society.

On Saturday evening last Mrs. R. B. Way arrived here with her two children, and we are pleased to learn that the visit to the East has proved of much benefit to that lady's health.

Mr. Thos. Swanson, accompanied by Messrs. Barker and Platt, have gone upon a hunting expedition, and to judge from the outfit taken with them they must expect to stay away some time and to bring back a lot of game.

As will be seen by advertisement in this issue, the Winnipeg weekly Free Press offers special inducements to subscribers for 1885. The Free Press is in every respect a first-class newspaper, and the liberal offer of the publishers will no doubt be duly appreciated by the settlers of the Territories.

Our town to be built up to the proportions which it is to be made I will soon reach must be carefully fostered in all directions by its own inhabitants. It is not always remembered that every effort made by the individual to beautify and make attractive his own residence, goes far to make the town attractive to outsiders as a spot in which to cast their lot. Should we go in for incorporation it must be remembered that only the election of the ablest men to overlook the expenditure of revenue, which must be met by promptly paid up taxes can ensure success, and that money spent on permanent and necessary improvements is most profitably invested. The money in a town should when possible be kept in it, and the way to do this is for merchants to freely advertise what they have got for sale, so that people may not send elsewhere for what is in the town.

It may be remembered that we have more than once expressed the hope that by the curing of pork and fostering of some other industries at home a stop might be put to the enormous egress of cash which makes that commodity at times so scarce here. Yesterday we were favored with a sight of some home cured bacon, and we may say the inside aspect of it is such as to lead one to feel in anticipation of the taste which we have been promised as by the enterprising farmer, Mr. Deacon, who deserves all honor for being the first to set a practical example to our settlers in this direction. Should, as we have no doubt will be the case, this bacon prove as good as it looks we fail to see how our merchants can refuse to better themselves and the public by buying an article as good as can be imported, which they can buy and sell at far more reasonable rates. The advantage to everyone of keeping the cash in circulation here is obvious, and Mr. Deacon, who not only cures but values the pork himself, asserts that the abatement of crops of all that goes to form the substance of pigs will enable farmers here not only to utilize damaged grain profitably, but when there is none of that, to fatten pigs so cheaply as to defy outside competition.

LOST IN THE BUSH.

Willie Shingles' Troubles.

As our reporter was taking a stroll on Monday evening, he noticed a gentleman sauntering along with down cast head and muttering to himself. On a nearer approach our reporter was able to get a report of his muttering, which will be found below.

The most miserable day I ever spent in my life was when I broke the Sabbath day against my will. Johnnie Blacksmith, Bob Haines, Commander Frigate, Jim Garver, and Mr. Ainslie, persuaded me against my will to go shooting last Sabbath, and told me I could admire nature and have a little fun. We crossed the river in a bit cockle o' a boat, and though I wasn't the least fearful, Frigate gave me a dram out o' a big bottle he had stowed away in his pocket, and tempting providence, etc. a man he is, w' a face like a nor' west moon, an' a nose like a fussy carrot; a terrible man at the grub, an' an unmerciful' gossip-monger, especially o' turtle soup, devil'd kidneys, an' greenland bedstead pies. We went about a day and night casting. So thinking I heard a bear or some big beast I crept hen in the bush to kill the monster, but hien a thing could I see, so I thought I'd turn. Well, I went on and on and found the last could I see o' the rest. I roared, I shouted, but no answer till at last I felt I was lost; alone likeholmie like the whale's belly. Oh, why did they persuade me to break the Sabbath! Darkness came on an' I was hungry, an' lonesome. I thought if my doany My doany me now. I thought I saw her sweet face an' fresh buttery smile, as she said tae me the last night I saw her. Willie Shingle ye're the apple o' my eye, the joy o' my heart, the glory o' my existence, and the death o' my sinny. See a lang dreary night I spent trying my prayers for those who had persuaded me tae break the Sabbath, and when the Indians found me I was a bonny looking object w' laque, hunger and cold. I was lik drinkin' screener, an' a weeping fanatic. Oh if I wassa happier than a thousand kings, when I got home once more, an' had my partied before me. But it was no' for me, for he had persuaded tae break the Sabbath day, an' let me tell ye it's a warning tae ye, ah, ye'll never hear o' Willie Shingle lairdie the like again.

POLICE NEWS.

Corp. McNeill returned to Battleford on Saturday morning last.

Inspector Howe has had a busy week giving interviews to applicants desirous of renting their houses for the new Bar racks.

Ottepau, the squaw who was sentenced to one month with hard labor for assault, was released on Thursday morning, her term of imprisonment having expired. The boys heard the loss of the "child of the detachment," and give vocal expression to their grief in a new song, entitled "Empty is the barracks baby's gone."

The detachment at this post now consists of one officer, two non-commissioned officers, and eighteen men, all of whom are under canvas, owing to the want of accommodation in the barracks. Inspector Howe soon had everything in order, and drilled his men on the second morning after his arrival. The detachment is drilled every morning and the barracks now present quite a busy scene. Many comments are made on the neat soldierlike appearance of Corp. Leacock and party who rode through the town the other day dressed in full regimentals.

This morning Inspector Howe inspected the detachment on full dress parade, after which they were put through a series of movements, including pistol drill. The men looked remarkably well in their helmets, tunics and cross belts, and went through their drill with excellent precision. Altogether the detachment here is second to none in the country.

This is the oyster season. "R," you know.
